Clarkumen Advisory | AI for Accounting and Financial Services Firms

SECTION 1: HERO

Headline: Don't Get Left Behind by the AI Shift in Finance.

Subheadline: Accounting and financial services firms are moving. We help yours move smarter.

Body: No jargon. No tool pushing. Just a business-first approach that identifies where AI reduces workload, improves capacity, and creates real value inside your firm.

SECTION 2: THE PROBLEM

Label: Sound Familiar?

Headline: Still on the Agenda. Never on the Calendar.

Body: That is not a criticism. It is the reality for most firms right now.

AI stays on the agenda. Discussed. Deferred. Discussed again.

Meanwhile, firms that moved early are cutting admin, reducing compliance workload, and improving capacity. That gap is not closing on its own.

One clear starting point is all it takes.

SECTION 3: WHO WE ARE

Label: Why Clarkumen Advisory Is Different?

Headline: Business First. Technology Second.

Body: Clarkumen Advisory was founded by Graeme Clark, a former CEO with over 30 years in the technology sector across Australia and Asia. Senior roles at Advent One, Lenovo, and IBM. An MBA from Melbourne Business School and a Graduate of the AICD.

We are not a technology vendor. We are a business advisory firm that specialises in AI, specifically for accounting and financial services firms. We start with your priorities, your people, and your pressures. Then we work out where AI can genuinely help.

That distinction shapes every conversation we have.

SECTION 4: HOW IT WORKS

Section Label: The Process

Headline: Four Steps. No Surprises.

Intro: Every engagement starts with a business conversation, not a technology pitch.

- Step 1: Start With the Business: Where is time being lost? Where is the firm too dependent on key people? That is the lens we use.
- Step 2: Identify What Actually Matters: We map the highest-impact AI opportunities for your firm. Not everything possible. Only what is practical and relevant.
- Step 3: Build a Roadmap You Can Execute: A clear 6 to 12 month plan. What to do first, what comes next, and how to bring your team along without disruption.
- Step 4: Implement and Stay on Track: For firms that want ongoing support, we stay involved through implementation and quarterly reviews.

SECTION 5: WHERE WE FOCUS

Label: Where We Focus

Headline: The Areas Where AI Moves the Needle for Your Firm.

Body: These are the areas where firms like yours are seeing the strongest results:

- Compliance and Review Work: Reducing the time senior staff spend on routine reviews so they can focus on higher-value work.
 - Client Onboarding; Automating repetitive steps so new clients move through the process faster with less back-and-forth.
 - Reporting and Document Preparation: Cutting the manual effort behind client reports, board packs, and internal documents.
 - Internal Administration: Smarter workflows that reduce admin load and free your team for work that actually matters.
 - Knowledge Capture and Continuity: Keeping critical expertise inside the firm, regardless of who comes or goes.

SECTION 6: PROOF POINTS

Label: What a Practical First Step Could Look Like

Headline: A Practical First Step Does Not Need to Be Complicated

Every business is different, but the first opportunity is often easier to find than people expect. It usually starts with one recurring bottleneck, one manual process, or one decision point that is consuming more time than it should.

Here are examples of what that first step could look like.

Scenario 1: Compliance Review Preparation

A mid-sized accounting firm has senior staff spending hours preparing for compliance reviews. The first step could be to map the current workflow, identify where time is being lost, and design a practical AI-supported process to prepare the information faster and more consistently.

The goal is not to replace expertise. It is to give experienced people more time to apply it.

Scenario 2: Client Onboarding

A financial advisory practice is dealing with too much back-and-forth during client onboarding. The first step could be to identify the repetitive admin tasks, standardise the information flow, and automate the parts of the process that do not require professional judgement.

The result could be a smoother experience for clients and less manual follow-up for the team.

Scenario 3: Knowing Where to Start With AI

A tax and business advisory firm knows AI matters but does not have a clear plan. The first step could be a structured discovery session to identify the highest-value opportunities, assess what is practical, and prioritise one or two areas that can be tested without major disruption.

The aim is not to create a large AI strategy document. It is to find a sensible starting point.

The common thread: none of these examples starts with a major transformation program. They start with a focused conversation about where time, cost, or capacity is being lost — and what could be improved first.

SECTION 7: WHAT THE CALL LOOKS LIKE

Label: Before You Book

Headline: 30 Minutes. No Agenda. Just Clarity.

Body: You do not need to prepare anything.

We will ask a few questions about where your firm is right now. Then we will share at least two specific areas where AI could make a practical difference, based on what we hear.

No pitch. No proposal. No pressure.

If it makes sense to keep talking, we will. If not, you still walk away with something useful.

SECTION 8: OUR SERVICES

Label: Four Ways to Work With Us

Headline: Start Where It Makes Sense for Your Firm.

Introduction to AI: A practical, jargon-free workshop that gives your leadership team the confidence and clarity to move forward.

Discovery and Strategy: A structured process that identifies your highest-impact AI opportunities and delivers a clear 6 to 12 month roadmap.

Implementation: We work alongside your team to implement AI solutions that fit your existing workflows. No technical barriers, no disruption.

Ongoing Advisory: Quarterly reviews to keep your AI roadmap relevant as the business evolves. Senior AI expertise without the full-time cost.

CTA: Get Started

SECTION 9: FINAL CTA

Headline: You Do Not Need a Plan to Start. Just a Problem Worth Solving.

Body: Most firms we work with arrived with a problem, not a plan. That is enough to start.

One 30-minute conversation is all it takes to move from uncertain to clear.
